Barkerville Historic Town & Park is the largest and most significant living museum and heritage asset in Western North America. The site is owned by the Province of British Columbia and managed on their behalf by the Barkerville Heritage Trust, a non-profit society and registered charity.

Chinese people represented the majority of the population in Barkerville by the height of the Gold Rush and were an important and integral part of the Cariboo gold mining community despite rampant discrimination. The Chinese population of Barkerville was approximately 3,000 people at its peak. In the early years, these were mostly men who were labourers, merchants, and miners. However, in the later years, there were many families in Barkerville's Chinese community, and many of them still live in the region.
